Progress & History of Yokohama

With only a population of 600, the small village Yokohama started to become widely known to its own country and the world, when its port first opened in 1859. Since then, Yokohama has been taking hold its business function as a modern trading city, pursuing export of Japanese silk and tea. The Great Kanto Earthquake on September 1st, 1923 totally devastated Yokohama. Its original state, however, was mostly restored by around 1929 with the genuine efforts taken by the citizens. After 1931, Yokohama turned its direction towards becoming a heavy chemical industrial city grown from a successful commercial trading city as a result of the reclamation of the coast line which was eventually developed into the Keihin Industrial Area. The bombing hit Yokohama on May 29, 1945, just before the end of World War II, burning 42% of the city. Due to the requisition of 90% of port facilities and 27% of the city by the Allied Forces after the war, Yokohama's reconstruction and adjustment fell behind significantly compared to other cities. As Japan entered the age of high economic growth, however, Yokohama started to advance a city development and enjoy a rapid population growth. In 1989, Yokohama celebrated its 100th anniversary of the Commencement of the City Administration and the Yokohama Expo (YES '89) took place. As we mark significant milestones in 2009 commemorating the 150th Anniversary of the Opening of the Port of Yokohama as well as the 120th Anniversary of the Commencement of the City Administration, Yokohama will advance in creating a city filled with dreams and hopes while transmitting a positive message to the world. Welcome Messages

In cooperation with ICSSPE, the 2020 Yokohama Sport Conference will be held in Yokohama over a five-day period, September 8–12, 2020, following the 2020 Summer Olympics and Paralympics. It will be the first time in half a century for Japan to host this international conference. The conference venue is located in Yokohama, which is next to Tokyo and can be very easily accessed from Japan's foremost international airports, Narita and Haneda. Yokohama is also a historic and cosmopolitan city and is the place from where Japan was opened up to foreign trade following its long period of national seclusion.

The theme of the 2020 Yokohama Sport Conference is "Contributing to a Sustainable World." In this day and age, various innovations in technology have left our world and planet facing a mountain of problems. Fortunately, though, the area of physical education, health and sport in which we are involved holds much value that can benefit everyone, nurturing and enhancing us, maintaining our physical and mental health, and allowing us to share fun with each other. More than just people gathering from various disciplines around the world to exchange views, engage in discussion and rediscover that value, let us strive to pool our wisdom to create shared value and contribute to a sustainable world. We look forward to seeing you all in Yokohama.

We are delighted to announce that the 2020 Yokohama Sport Conference will take place from Tuesday 8 September to Saturday 12 September at PACIFICO Yokohama North, in Yokohama, Japan.

With this conference, which is taken place in the timely context of the 2020 Olympic and Paralympic Summer Games, we invite you to return to the host country of the 1964 Olympic Games. With this conference we intend to provide an international, interdisciplinary scientific meeting-place for physical education, sport, and health sciences.

In 2015, the UNESCO's International Charter of Physical Education, Physical Activity and Sport was completely revised to emphasize the fact that physical education, physical activity and sport can yield a wide range of benefits to individuals, communities and society at large. In the same year, the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development was adopted by the United Nations. The Agenda clearly stated that sport plays an important role in achieving the 17 international goals.

The theme of the Yokohama conference, preparations for which are currently well underway, is "contributing to a sustainable world". Our goal is to build a better society through physical activity and sport, and to deepen discussions on an international level that contribute to world peace. In the wind of the international community becoming globalised and commercialised, the social environment surrounding sport is changing drastically. The Yokohama conference aims to contribute to the future and by promoting dialogue among the people from different social positions and different academic fields, such as sport-related technologies, human rights, and sports business.

To make it easier for young researchers in undergraduate or graduate programmes to participate in the conference, registration fees have been more than halved for students. The conference will give you the opportunity to engage in dialogue across different generations. I hope you will join us in being part of an international research network aspiring for the future of sustainable societies through sport.

In welcoming researchers, practitioners, and others from around the world to participate in the Yokohama conference, I hope we can count on the cooperation and support from many different areas in order to make this conference and enriching experience for everyone.
